Interpreting the Symbols and Abbreviations in Seventeenth Century English and American Documents

A BOARD FOR CERTIFICATION OF GENEALOGISTS SKILLBUILDING-TRACK LECTURE

The genealogist’s first encounter with documents written in the secretary hand, also known as Elizabethan Script, is often one of frustration. Medieval symbols used for combinations of certain letters, and the liberal use of unfamiliar abbreviations and contractions, are major impediments. My goal is to provide examples of 16th and 17th century handwriting and, in particular, examples of the many abbreviations and special symbols that so often cause readers trouble. Examples of the capitals and minuscules encountered in Elizabethan handwriting are shown in Figures 1 and 2, respectively.

SPELLING

Correct orthography in the 16th, 17th, and early 18th centuries was unknown. Until the late 18th century, there were no hard rules concerning the spelling of words, place-names, or surnames. Words were written phonetically, as a series of sounds, often influenced by dialect. It is not unusual to find words, including surnames, spelled in several different ways on the same page. Common words may appear anywhere in the text with a capitalized first letter, and punctuation is nonexistent or, at the least, unsystematic.

Examples of some 17th century spelling that differ from that accepted today are listed below. This list is not all-inclusive; it is, however, quite representative of words that one will encounter.

Addition of a terminal e: soe doe owne ownd newe
Omission of a terminal e: ar nar wer nar ther fer wher Doubling of consonants: att itt hadd wadd sett

to my sonne to my point Lordshippes Lordshipp
Common vowel sounds: yeares yeared yeeres yore yeres yeer
Interchange of y for i: yt ye ys yis Dyd Dyd payd payd
Interchange of w for u: stoode Bownde pownd pownd

*Adapted from An Introduction to Bibliography for Literary Students, by R. B. McKerrow (Oxford, the Clarendon Press, 1928).
The letters i and j: In the Roman alphabet, i and j were two forms of the same letter, but in the 16th and 17th centuries, i was used instead of j, both initially and medially, either vowel or consonant. As a consonant, the letter was pronounced as we pronounce j, as in jury, but written iury. Examples are:

enjoy [enjoy]
enjoy
iustly [justly]
imby j oynt [joynt]
ioynt

The letter j does appear, however, in lower-case Roman numerals ending with one or more i's:

xxxiij[33]
viiij[8]
lxvij[77]

The letters u and v: In the Roman alphabet, u and v were two forms of the same letter, but inter-changeable either as consonant or vowel. Thus, we find vnto and unto, or have and haue. A convention arising in the 16th century preferred that v be used initially and u medially. Thus, we often find the spellings vp, vnuste, vse, vnto, vnrauel, and euery, gaue, haue, recouer. Some examples are:

vse
vp vnto
vnder
mandor
haue
gauo, gauo
foruer
former
Also I giue vnto Anne
Auo I giue unto Amo

CONTRACTIONS AND ABBREVIATIONS

Probably the single most difficult aspect of reading old manuscripts is interpreting the many and various contractions and abbreviations that were used by scribes to save space and time. Generally, an abbreviated word is marked by an upward and backward stroke attached to the last letter written. Contraction was usually accomplished by using various symbols from Medieval Latin and by using superior letters, usually the terminal letter or letters of a word or syllable.

The thorn þ is the Old English runic letter þ. It represents the th sound as in this that
and their
and medially as in father
and in declare whither

The letter y often represents the thorn in ye = the, yf = that, and ys = this; as above, however, note that ye = you, yt = it, and ys = is. Ye olde shoppe is pronounced The old shop. Examples are:

the
that the sayde Defend Leas of the mylles

The tittle, a short, straight, wavy or looped line appearing over a letter or letters, generally indicates the omission of an m or n, or the contraction of tion to con. Examples are:

manner
Auncyacon [annunciation]
Auncyacon commit
remitted

Commonly Domonly
Commyssyoners
Commyssyon
the somme

In the last example, some, usually spelled somme, refers to a sum of money. Numerous examples can be found where a title has been placed over a single n or m where today’s usage would require only a single n or m.

The medieval symbols \( \mathfrak{p}, \mathfrak{q} \) representing per or par and \( \mathfrak{p}, \mathfrak{q} \) representing pro appear initially as in parishe \( \mathfrak{p} \mathfrak{r} \mathfrak{i} \mathfrak{s} \mathfrak{h} \mathfrak{e} \), perfect \( \mathfrak{p} \mathfrak{r} \mathfrak{e} \mathfrak{f} \mathfrak{t} \), parcell \( \mathfrak{p} \mathfrak{r} \mathfrak{o} \mathfrak{l} \ \mathfrak{p} \mathfrak{a} \mathfrak{t} \mathfrak{e} \), promised \( \mathfrak{p} \mathfrak{r} \mathfrak{o} \mathfrak{m} \mathfrak{i} \mathfrak{p} \mathfrak{d} \), profitt \( \mathfrak{p} \mathfrak{r} \mathfrak{o} \mathfrak{f} \mathfrak{t} \) and medially as in:

appertayne \( \mathfrak{a} \mathfrak{p} \mathfrak{p} \mathfrak{a} \mathfrak{y} \mathfrak{n} \mathfrak{e} \), Draper \( \mathfrak{d} \mathfrak{r} \mathfrak{a} \mathfrak{p} \mathfrak{e} \mathfrak{r} \), departed \( \mathfrak{d} \mathfrak{e} \mathfrak{p} \mathfrak{a} \mathfrak{r} \mathfrak{t} \mathfrak{e} \) and both forms are present in proper \( \mathfrak{o} \mathfrak{r} \mathfrak{p} \mathfrak{e} \) rightfully & properly \( \mathfrak{r} \mathfrak{i} \mathfrak{g} \mathfrak{r} \mathfrak{i} \mathfrak{t} \mathfrak{f} \mathfrak{l} \mathfrak{y} \).

There exist numerous contractions for the letters er, ir, or, ur, and re. Examples are:

\begin{align*}
\text{ser} \text{ or sir} & \Rightarrow \text{s} \text{e} \text{r} & \text{and} & \Rightarrow \text{a} \text{n} \text{d} \text{e} \text{tc} \text{e} \text{t} \text{e} \text{r} \text{a} & \text{weight} & \Rightarrow \text{w} \text{e} \text{i} \text{g} \text{h} \text{t} \text{r} \text{a} \text{s} \text{t} \text{e} \text{r} \text{a} \\
\end{align*}

Other contractions often found include:

\begin{align*}
\text{wch} \ [\text{which}] & \Rightarrow \text{w} \text{h} \text{c} & \text{wth} \ [\text{with}] & \Rightarrow \text{w} \text{h} \text{t} \\
\end{align*}

In the following examples, the letter e in the preceding the has been dropped, and the th has been joined directly to the following word:

\begin{align*}
\text{by the} \text{executors} & \Rightarrow \text{b} \text{y} \text{the} \text{exec} \text{u} \text{t} \text{o} \text{r} \text{s} & \text{thelder} & \Rightarrow \text{t} \text{h} \text{e} \text{l} \text{d} \text{e} \text{r} \\ \end{align*}
