“Her Sixth Matrimonial Venture”: The Many Marriages of Ida May Chamberlain

By Sharon L. Hoyt, MLIS, CG

News items from the hometowns of Ida and her family across the territorial West point to records and reveal her story.

Tracing women with multiple marriages can be difficult, especially when they married before record keeping began. When vital records are unavailable, or the marriage place is unknown, newspapers can provide missing information and suggest avenues for research. More clearly than most, Ida May Chamberlain’s case shows how newspapers identify likely records and flesh out forgotten lives.

Nothing marked Ida’s 1907 marriage as unusual. “The charming widow of Judge Joseph Campbell of Phoenix . . . a beautiful woman” married Dr. Archibald H. Hooker on 15 August 1907 in San Diego, California. It reportedly was a second marriage for both.<sup>1</sup> They married before “fifty or sixty of the most prominent business men in the city” after a board meeting of the First Congregational Church. Ida’s sister, Mary J. Dunning of Concordia, Kansas, might have been the only other woman at the wedding.<sup>2</sup>

Ida was well known in Concordia, and its newspaper noted her California marriage. The announcement also revealed a startling fact: Ida’s marriage to Dr.

Hooker was not her second; it was “her sixth matrimonial venture.”<sup>3</sup> Arizona Territory and Kansas newspapers between 1883 and 1907 identify Ida as the wife of J. R. Kilpatrick, Mickey Stewart, and Joseph Campbell.<sup>4</sup> Mention of her son Charlie Hamilton indicates a fifth marriage.<sup>5</sup>

Ida’s marriages did not occur in Arizona Territory, where her husbands were prominent in business and politics. Arizona newspaper articles point to Ida’s California marriage records, which contain conflicting information on her age, number of marriages, and birthplace.<sup>6</sup>

Like many women’s stories, Ida’s unfolds via records of the men in her life.

By June 1860 George, his wife (“Welthy”), and five children lived in Lake City, Minnesota.<sup>10</sup> The three oldest children’s births predate George and Caroline’s marriage, clouding their parentage. Six months before Caroline married George, she brought a bastardy suit against Cornelius E. Baldwin. When she failed to appear, the suit was dismissed, but it could pertain to a child in the 1860 Chamberlain household.<sup>11</sup>

On 19 January 1862 George enlisted in Company H of the Fifth Minnesota Infantry at Fort Snelling, in Saint Paul, Minnesota. Detailed there as a hospital nurse, he later served at Corinth, Mississippi, and Memphis, Tennessee. He was honorably discharged at Saint Paul in 1865.<sup>12</sup>

In June 1867 George took a job as a lead carpenter at Fort Rice in Dakota Territory, one of the furthest outposts on the western frontier. His wife and four children followed several months later.<sup>13</sup> Established in July 1864, the post protected white settlers moving into Sioux tribal lands.<sup>14</sup>

The Chamberlains lodged near the officers’ quarters, where the family’s disruptive behavior attracted attention. Lieutenant Louis Adair found George’s wife’s and sons’ “very indecent language” inappropriate for his young daughter, with whom George’s daughters quarreled. The family was soon moved outside the garrison, the site of Indian councils.<sup>15</sup> The Chamberlains likely witnessed a treaty signing that brought several thousand Sioux to the fort in July 1868.<sup>16</sup>

The family was probably at Fort Rice in February 1869, when Mary Jane Chamberlain married there, but they were not enumerated there in 1870.<sup>17</sup> They likely moved south to White Swan, a small Dakota Territory settlement at the end of the military road from Sioux City, Iowa. The village was an important stage and supply station.<sup>18</sup> The Chamberlains were in White Swan by April 1872, when Ida married there.

CHARLES LEWIS HAMILTON

Ida, described as “a young and handsome girl of sixteen summers,” was only fourteen when she married Charles Hamilton, thirty-five.<sup>19</sup> Charles was “one of those genial, easy, clever gentlemen who have made the border and frontier famous for its hospitality.”<sup>20</sup> From about 1866 through 1872 Charles was a post trader at Fort Randall, Dakota Territory, across the Missouri River from White Swan. During that period he established photography studios at Yankton, Dakota Territory, and Sioux City, Iowa.<sup>21</sup> Shortly before marrying Ida, Charles left Fort Randall and opened a photo studio at Sioux Falls, Dakota Territory. He made stereographic scenery pictures but today is known for his early photographs of Native American tribal leaders.<sup>22</sup>

Charles and Ida’s son, Charles F. Hamilton, was born about 21 April 1873 in Macon County, Missouri, where his father had lived before arriving in Dakota Territory.<sup>23</sup> The Hamiltons returned to Dakota Territory before 1880, when Charles was a miner, and reportedly married. Ida, however, was elsewhere.<sup>24</sup>

JAMES RENWICK KILPATRICK

"Mrs. Ida Hambleton, daughter of Geo. Chamberlain, hotel keeper at White Swan," married telegraph operator and postmaster J. R. Kilpatrick on 13 January 1879.<sup>27</sup> James, "a companionable gentleman," worked in the outpost's trading store, one of "the only improvements outside of the Indian huts and tepees" besides Chamberlain's hotel.<sup>28</sup>

In 1876 the hotel was advertised as "one of the first-class establishments of the country."<sup>29</sup> A description in fall 1877 is less flattering:

A log shack of a place. . . . Out in the "office" a bunch of squawmen were talking and quarreling in French over cards, and in the timber nearby a commotion was kept up by a lot of Indians, and a squaw was particularly making the night hideous by her screams, cries, and moans.<sup>30</sup>

In March 1879, soon after James and Ida's marriage, a prairie fire destroyed most buildings at White Swan, including Chamberlain's hotel, the post and telegraph offices, and the Kilpatricks' home. James, "the chief victim" of the White Swan fire, rebuilt by August 1879.<sup>31</sup>

In March 1880 the Kilpatricks left White Swan for Butte, Montana Territory.<sup>32</sup> Two months later James was the telegraph operator and express agent at nearby Deer Lodge. Its newspaper welcomed "Mr. and Mrs. K," saying "we trust they will be pleased with our town.”<sup>33</sup> Apparently not pleased, a month later James and Ida had moved to Helena, Montana Territory.<sup>34</sup>

In August 1882 Ida was in Concordia, Kansas, preparing to join James in Albuquerque, New Mexico, where he worked for a grocery firm.<sup>35</sup> The Kilpatricks apparently lived at Concordia, where Ida’s brother-in-law owned a grocery business, and where “J. A.” Kilpatrick sold a grocery store in February 1882.<sup>36</sup>

In November 1883 James established his own grocery business in rapidly growing Flagstaff, founded two years earlier in Arizona Territory.<sup>37</sup> James and Ida quickly became prominent in early Flagstaff society. At the 1884 season’s opening ball, Ida was “very becomingly dressed in black satin, passementeries [sic] trimming, with cut steal [sic] ornaments and Langtry waves.”<sup>38</sup>

Despite success in Flagstaff, Ida’s illness in 1885 and a fire that destroyed James’s business in February 1886, disrupted their life.<sup>39</sup> In October 1889, after their son’s birth and sickness, Ida left James. She lived with friends and family in Kansas and California until her divorce from James on 15 March 1890. Although Ida had accused James of abuse, he received sole custody of their sixteen-month-old son.<sup>40</sup>

Ida’s separation from her son could have contributed to her decision to remarry James on 15 June 1891.<sup>41</sup> They returned to Flagstaff and settled on a rugged 160-acre homestead. Heavy winter snows made it a summer-only residence.<sup>42</sup>

The Kilpatricks’ second marriage fared no better than their first. Ida returned to Los Angeles in 1894 and divorced James on 26 January 1895.<sup>43</sup>

WILLIAM GEORGE “MICKY” STEWART

Ida next married “strikingly handsome” William Stewart, an attorney and politician whose soaring oratory and fierce negotiating skills in the Thirteenth Arizona Territorial Legislature earned him the title “the little giant of the North.”<sup>47</sup> Ida and James Kilpatrick had known Stewart from their early days in Flagstaff. In 1884 Stewart worked in Kilpatrick’s store.<sup>48</sup> Portraying “a wild Irishman,” William also acted with Ida in a play.<sup>49</sup> Thereafter people called him “Mickey.”<sup>50</sup>

Prominent Flagstaff businessmen, Mickey and James frequently interacted, and Mickey represented James in a lawsuit.<sup>51</sup> By October 1887, however, their relationship was strained. Mickey filed, then withdrew, a criminal case against James.<sup>52</sup> Two years later James accused Mickey of assault with a deadly weapon, a charge deemed baseless.<sup>53</sup> The two men also ran competing banks in Flagstaff.<sup>54</sup> Whether Ida caused the tension between them is unknown, but Mickey, a notary public who documented Ida’s abuse claims for her divorce complaint, knew of her marital troubles.<sup>55</sup>

On 28 March 1891, a year after Ida's first divorce from James, she and Mickey obtained a marriage license in Los Angeles.<sup>56</sup> A week later a Prescott newspaper announced "the redoubtable Mickey Stewart has wandered into the bonds of matrimony . . . in Los Angeles, to the former wife of J. R. Kilpatrick of Flagstaff."<sup>57</sup> The report proved "untrue"<sup>58</sup> Mickey, however, probably expected to marry soon. He likely was surprised when only three months after he and Ida obtained a marriage license, she remarried James Kilpatrick.

Ida married Mickey in Los Angeles on 27 January 1895, the day after receiving her second divorce from James and almost four years after obtaining a marriage license with Mickey.<sup>59</sup> Mickey, however, had consumption. On 18 April 1895, four months after the marriage, he died at Flagstaff.<sup>60</sup> Ida, executrix of Mickey's estate, accompanied his body to his boyhood home of Fairfield, Iowa, for burial.<sup>61</sup>

JOSEPH CAMPBELL

Ida Stewart married well-known judge and former Phoenix mayor Joseph Campbell in Los Angeles on 29 July 1896.<sup>62</sup> Although their marriage record places her birth in California in 1862 and does not give her maiden name, a newspaper identifies the bride as "the widow of the late Mickey Stewart of Flagstaff."<sup>63</sup> Ida might have been financially independent at this point. Besides owning property in Flagstaff and her likely inheritance from Mickey's estate, she inherited sixty thousand dollars shortly after marrying Joseph.<sup>64</sup>

In 1900 Joseph and Ida lived in Phoenix, where he was in poor health. In February 1901 they moved to Honolulu, Hawaii, hoping the climate would benefit him. A year later, seeing no improvement, they returned to Arizona Territory.<sup>65</sup> They moved frequently, living in Globe (1902–3), Solomonville (1904), and Tombstone (1905).<sup>66</sup> In January 1906 Ida and Joseph went to Los Angeles to visit his daughter with his first wife.<sup>67</sup> On 1 February 1906, five days after their arrival, Joseph, forty-nine, died of heart disease.<sup>68</sup>

ARCHIBALD H. HOOKER

After Joseph died Ida visited her sister, Mary, in San Diego and, in August 1907, married dentist Archibald H. Hooker.<sup>69</sup> She apparently remained in San Diego for only a few months after marrying. In February 1908 “Mrs. Dr. A. H. Hooker” went to “her old home in Sioux City, Iowa, in answer to property interest demands which claim her personal attention.”<sup>70</sup> She was still there in June 1909.<sup>71</sup>

Ida Hooker was enumerated at San Diego in April 1910, but her census entry is inconsistent with her 1907 marriage record.<sup>72</sup> The census places her birth in Iowa, rather than Saint Louis, Missouri; says her marriage to Archibald was her third, not her sixth; and gives her parents’ birthplaces as [blank] and England, rather than New York and Michigan. The discrepancies suggest Ida did not provide the information herself, possibly because she was in Sioux City. She perhaps chose not to return to avoid being ensnared in a scandal surrounding her husband, accused in December 1909 of embezzling money entrusted to him by a family friend.<sup>73</sup>

Archibald and Ida likely divorced before February 1912, when she remarried again. Archibald moved to Calexico, California, where he died of “ptomaine” poisoning on 28 March 1918.<sup>74</sup>

RICHARD THEODORE WARNER

A brief marriage-license notice in the newspaper identifies Ida's next marriage.<sup>75</sup> On 12 February 1912 Ida married railroad engineer Richard T. Warner in Upland, California.<sup>76</sup> Their marriage certificate, giving her age as thirty-seven, says she was marrying for the second time, although it was the seventh. It names her parents George Chamberlain and Carrie Kircum (Caroline Kirkham), whose names also appear on the record of Ida's marriage to Archibald Hooker.

Ida's friends and family might not have known about her marriage to Warner. In 1913 a newspaper noted "Mrs. Mary J. Moore of Wichita and her sister Mrs. Ida Campbell of Los Angeles, Calif., will leave tomorrow for Wichita, where Mrs. Campbell will be the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Moore for the winter."<sup>77</sup> The social mention points to the location where Ida filed the divorce suit.<sup>78</sup>

Richard contested her suit, saying he had returned from work to find his wife's note:

She had gone East to see her sister. This was a double surprise as Mr. Warner said he did not know she had a sister. He also found she had cleaned out the safe deposit box.

After Ida's suit was dismissed in January 1915 "at the cost of the plaintiff," Richard divorced her in November 1915.<sup>79</sup> He remarried in Los Angeles, where he died on 21 December 1929.<sup>80</sup>

CHARLES OSCAR BEEKS

Ida's whereabouts between 1915 and 1920 are unknown. If she married during those years, no record has appeared. In November 1921 her son identified her as Ida M. Beeks.<sup>81</sup> The name leads to Ida's eighth marriage.<sup>82</sup> On 9 November 1920 Ida married Charles Oscar Beeks in Santa Barbara, California, about 120 miles north of his Long Beach, California, home. A Missouri native, she reportedly lived in Los Angeles. Her given age, forty, was twenty-three years younger than her likely age.<sup>83</sup>

In 1921 and 1922 Ida May Beeks lived in Long Beach at 211 Linden Avenue, the address of Mrs. Ida May Campbell in 1924–30.<sup>84</sup> The surname reversion suggests Ida divorced Beeks in 1922–24. If so, they did not file in Los Angeles County.<sup>85</sup>

JOHN A. VENSEL

Ida apparently intended to remarry yet again. In January 1931 Long Beach residents Ida M. Campbell, fifty-four, and John A. Vensel, sixty-nine, applied for a marriage license in neighboring Orange County, California.<sup>86</sup> They apparently did not marry.<sup>87</sup>

CONCLUSION

Ida moved before 1932 to Los Angeles, where she died of chronic interstitial nephritis on 17 September 1933. Her death certificate identifies her as “Ida Mae Beaks also known as Ida Mae Campbell,” daughter of George Chamberland and Caroline Kirker, and ex-wife of Charles Beaks. Informant William H. Wilson shared Ida’s address.<sup>88</sup> He had lived there in 1920, when his immediate neighbor was Mary E. Beeks, Ida’s former mother-in-law.<sup>89</sup> Ida left no estate record.<sup>90</sup>

George remarried (4) his first wife, Caroline (Kirkham) Chamberlain, at Edgerton, South Dakota, in September 1894. ### George “Bidwell”

About 1886 George Chamberlain left his family at White Lake in Dakota Territory and went to Parkdale, Manitoba. There, as “George Bidwell,” he claimed to be a widower, and “spoke to his Parkdale friends of his dearly departed spouse in the warmest and most affectionate terms.”<sup>109</sup> In late 1886 George Bidwell married Francis (Omand) Beddome at the Church of England parish church at St. Andrews in Manitoba. His marriage registration identifies his parents as Justin Bidwell and Caroline Kirkham, the name of his first wife.<sup>110</sup>

In April 1887 Caroline discovered George’s location, and he was tried for bigamy in the Winnipeg Police Court. Newspaper accounts of the courtroom proceedings contrast George’s “quite cool and unconcerned” demeanor with that of his “weeping and fainting” first wife, who was “calling on her husband to come back and live with her.”<sup>111</sup> No known records indicate whether George was

Mary Bell Black,<sup>167</sup> born in May 1874 in West Virginia.<sup>168</sup> They divorced before 12 November 1902.<sup>169</sup> Charles married (2), on 15 October 1904 at San Rafael, California, Louise E. W. Wedekind.<sup>170</sup> While married to Louise, Charles married (3), on 2 June 1909 at Flagstaff, Arizona Territory, Clara B. Fisher.<sup>171</sup> Charles divorced Louise on 20 October 1913.<sup>172</sup> He married (4), on 10 November 1921 at Long Beach, California, Edna Wardle, daughter of Ralph Wardle and Effie M. Stearns.<sup>173</sup> He married perhaps (5) Mabel [—?—], whose name appears only on his death record and might have been his first wife, Mary Bell Black.<sup>174</sup>

Like his mother, Charles moved frequently. Besides California, he lived in Dakota Territory, New Mexico, Texas, Arizona, Utah, and Colorado.<sup>175</sup> His frequent moves are consistent with his wife Louise's statement that during their brief marriage, Charles was "very discontented, changing from one job to another." In October 1905, after Charles left Louise and their infant daughter in California and returned to Arizona, Louise filed for divorce. She later dropped the suit. Charles reportedly believed they were divorced when he married Clara B. Fisher on 2 June 1909. Clara filed for divorce after Louise charged Charles with bigamy. After pleading guilty
